

JHU AND YOU!

Reconnect and Make an Impact

As a Johns Hopkins alum, you are in a unique position to impact the next generation of Hopkins graduates. You understand and can appreciate the rigors of a Hopkins education. You have used that rigor to advance and excel in your own career. Perhaps you would even credit some of this success to the generosity – gifts of time, funding, opportunity, confidence – of a Hopkins professor, mentor, or fellow alum. By choosing to engage with our current students, you are continuing this powerful tradition of generosity.

HOST AN INTERN

Biomedical Careers Initiative (BCI) internship program seeks partner companies and organizations outside of academia – industry, non-profits, and beyond – who are interested in hosting Hopkins biomedical PhD trainees as interns. The internship gives host sites the opportunity to establish a pipeline of motivated students and infuses teams with new perspectives, ideas, and energy.

BE A MENTOR

The Professional Development and Career Office (PDCO) is leading the creation of career working groups – trainee groups that form around a particular area of interest such as business and finance, science communication and advocacy, and research administration. We welcome the involvement of professionals like you who are willing to share expertise via an advisory role for one of these cohorts.

SHARE YOUR STORY

Through the “Casual Conversations” speaker series, you have the opportunity to interact directly with our students by sharing details of your respective career path and answering questions from the audience.

“It was my genuine pleasure to speak with the students and post docs. I’m grateful to have the chance to give back to Hopkins.”

– Jason Rao, PhD’02; Director for International Affairs, American Society for Microbiology

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT
& CAREER
OFFICE

There are many ways to interact and engage with our biomedical PhD students and postdoctoral fellows. Contact us today at phd\_recruit@jhmi.edu today so that we can help devise an engagement plan that best suits your needs.